

The Natural Cycle

The course of history has a natural cycle and trend to it , whether it is in society or politics, the economy or the environment. The human species is defined by our ability to not only adapt to our circumstances but to alter them to our desires. While we seek to effect singular and isolated changes to our world we often instead amplify its natural cycles, whether it is in society or politics, the economy or the environment.